WELCOME TO METRO BOSTON

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT, REPORTER

Did you feel the effects of that storm that battered New England Sunday night into Monday? If so, you weren't alone. In fact, more than 300,000 people across the state lost power, according to the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency. Read about how the storm affected the state and what MEMA warns about downed wires at metro.us/boston.

US CAPTURES SUSPECTED BENGHAZI MILITANT

U.S. forces have captured a militant who is believed to have played a role in a 2012 attack on a U.S. diplomatic compound in Benghazi, Libya, that killed U.S. Ambassador Christopher Stevens and three other Americans, U.S. officials said on Monday. The officials, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said that U.S. Special Operation Forces captured the militant in Libya in the past few days. Two of the officials identified him as Mustafa al-Imam and said he had played a role in the attack and the ambassador's death. The officials said the man was now in the custody of the Department of Justice and being transported back to the United States by the military. They added that the operation was authorized by President Donald Trump and had notified the U.N.-backed Government of National Accord.

JUDGE BLOCKS MILITARY TRANSGENDER BAN

2 A federal judge in Washington on Monday blocked President Donald Trump from banning transgender people from serving in the U.S. military, handing a victory to transgender service members who accused the president of violating their constitutional rights. Trump announced in July that he would ban transgender people from the military in a move that would reverse Democratic former President Barack Obama's policy of accepting them and halt years of efforts to eliminate barriers to military service based on sexual orientation or gender identity. The transgender service members sued in August to try to block the ban, which had not yet gone into effect, and U.S. District Judge Colleen Kollar-Kotelly granted them an injunction halting enforcement of it until their case is resolved.

CHARGED IN RUSSIA PROBE

3 Paul Manafort, former campaign manager for Donald Trump, left, exits the U.S. Courthouse in Washington, D.C., on Monday. The federal investigation into whether President Trump's campaign colluded with Russia took a major turn Monday as authorities charged three people a former campaign chief, his business associate and an ex-policy adviser — with crimes including money laundering, lying to the FBI and conspiracy. For more, see page 5.

SIX KILLED AS ISRAEL DESTROYS GAZA TUNNEL

4 Six Palestinian militants were killed on Monday when Israel blew up what it said was a tunnel being dug across the Gaza Strip border. A source for the Islamic Jihad militant group said Arafat Abu Marshould, head of the faction's armed wing in central Gaza, was killed along with a senior associate and two other gunmen. The group said it had put its fighters on "full alert." The armed wing of the Islamist Hamas group said two of its gunmen were killed while trying to rescue Islamic Jihad men working in the tunnel. Gaza health officials said nine people were wounded. Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, in remarks to legislators of his right-wing Likud party, said "groundbreaking technology" aided the tunnel's discovery, but gave no details.

UN: CO2 LEVELS GREW AT RECORD PACE IN 2016

5 The amount of carbon dioxide in the earth's atmosphere grew at a record rate in 2016 to a level not seen for millions of years, potentially fuelling a 65.6 foot rise in sea levels and adding 3 degrees to temperatures, the United Nations said. Atmospheric concentrations of carbon dioxide (CO_2), the main man-made greenhouse gas, hit 403.3 parts per million (ppm), up from 400.0 in 2015, the U.N. World Meteorological Organization said in its annual Greenhouse Gas Bulletin. That growth rate was 50 percent faster than the average over the past decade, driving CO_2 levels 45 percent above pre-industrial levels and further outside the range of 180-280 ppm seen in recent cycles of ice ages and warmer periods.

Mayor Marty Walsh talks Tito, Trump and another term

Boston Mayor Marty Walsh will face off against Tito Jackson in the Nov. 7 election, but until then, he's keeping his cool.

SAMANTHA J. GROSS
@MetroBOS
letters@metro.us

Boston Mayor Martin J. Walsh has his eyes on a second term.

The incumbent mayor took 63 percent of votes in the preliminary election Sept. 26., according to city results. City Councilor Tito Jackson took just 29 percent of votes from the mere 56,000 ballots cast.

The two will face off Nov. 7 but until then, Walsh said he's keeping his cool, maintaining his strategy and reminding voters of his accomplishments in the last four years and plans for Boston's future.

How does it feel to go up against your former political ally, Tito Jackson?
I like the fact that we can have meaningful conversations. We've seen plenty of divisiveness on a national scale. I talked about what I did as a state representative and how I carried that into being mayor. When you watch a debate, you want to hear about what a person's accomplished and what the plan for the future is.

How has your campaign technique shifted since the preliminary election? What changes are being made?
We certainly are focusing on the areas we haven't done as well in, but for the most part, we did well in different neighborhoods. We tout a little bit of our accomplishments over the last four years and think about where our plans are moving forward.

In the primary, we worked really hard in every neighborhood in the city, knocking on doors and doing phone calls. At the end of the day [...] voters need person-to-person contact.

Before the preliminary election, you pledged to build a statue to honor civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. Where does that project stand?
A philanthropist, Paul English, came to us and made an offer to actually pay it. It's probably long overdue. Martin Luther King [Jr.] had a big impact, clearly. He preached at Twelfth Baptist Church in Roxbury, a lot of his philosophies came from his experience here in Boston.

Another promise was one of affordable housing in nearly every neighborhood. What does that look like?
The problem in Boston is that as quickly as we're building affordable housing, we have people moving into the city. ... We have housed 1,100 chronically homeless people over the last three-and-a-half years. That's 20 years of homelessness combined. Our goal is to end all chronic homelessness by 2018.

If you were to win in November, would this term differ from the last?
It's very different. Under the last administration, we had an open-door policy. We went as a bipartisan group to the White House to talk about what issues affect cities around America. It doesn't matter if you're a democrat or republican as far as life in a city. This administration has completely taken for granted the relationship with cities. It's unfortunate.

What do you mean specifically?
[Donald Trump] is talking about making infrastructure improvements across America with billions of dollars of investments, but not having local hiring language. So as long as money comes into Boston potentially for infrastructure, he doesn't have local hiring preference. It's a tough go.

We have one of the biggest housing authorities in this country. The divestment by the federal government [from local housing authorities] is scary. Not having a true partner on a national level is concerning to me. It's concerning to all mayors across America.

More than 300,000 in Massachusetts lose power after storm batters Northeast

Heavy rain and winds hit Massachusetts, leaving many without power and causing travel delays.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Hundreds of thousands of Massachusetts residents are without power Monday morning after a storm battered the state with strong winds and yesterday and into the early morning.

As of 6:45 a.m. Monday, there were about 304,000 power outages across the state, according to the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA). By 9:15 a.m., that number reached more than 316,000 outages, and included areas like Hingham, Andover and Topsfield.

Early Monday morning, areas on Cape Cod saw peak wind gusts between 72 and 82 miles per hour, according to the National Weather Service Boston.

The winds and rain are on the way out though, according to NWS meteorologists. Precipitation will end mid-morning and the flash flood warning for the region also expired Monday morning, they said. Winds won't be as strong as they were earlier, officials said, but could still reach 40 to 50 miles per hour.

Drivers have been cautioned about flooding on some roads in Milton, Lexington and Haverhill early Monday morning, and the MBTA warned commuters that service, especially on the commuter rail, may be affected by the rain.

Service alerts for the commuter rail detailed delays on 12 lines, including the Framingham/Worcester line, the Fairmount Line and the Needham line, due to "heavy rain, winds, downed trees and power outages throughout the area." Crews are working to clear the tracks. Monitor updates here or by following @MBTA_CR on Twitter.

MEMA also issued warnings to residents to avoid downed power lines and to call 9-1-1 to report downed wires. However, don't call 9-1-1 to report a power outage, the agency said — instead, call your utility provider. More power outage safety tips can be found here.

The MBTA commuter rail experienced delays as crews worked to clear downed trees and other debris from the storm that hit the state Sunday into Monday.

CHARGES IN RUSSIA PROBE

Two ex-Trump aides charged in Russia probe, third pleads guilty

Paul Manafort, a former campaign manager for President Donald Trump, was charged Monday with money laundering, and another onetime aide pleaded guilty to lying to the FBI, in a sharp escalation of a federal probe into Russian meddling in the 2016 U.S. presidential election.

Manafort, 68, a longtime Republican operative, and associate Rick Gates were arraigned at a federal courthouse in Washington.

Both men pleaded not guilty to a series of charges in a 12-count indictment, ranging from money laundering to acting as unregistered agents of Ukraine's former pro-Russian government.

Neither Trump nor his campaign were mentioned in the indictment against the pair. Many of the charges, some of which go back more than a decade, have to do with Manafort's work for Ukraine rather than the Trump campaign.

But in a separate development directly related to Trump's 2016 election campaign, it emerged on Monday that former campaign adviser George Papadopoulos pleaded guilty earlier this month to making false statements to Federal Bureau of Investigation agents.

Investigations by special counsel Robert Mueller and several congressional panels into alleged Russian efforts to tilt the election in Trump's favor and potential collusion by Trump aides have cast a shadow over the Republican president's first nine months in office.

Manafort ran the Trump campaign from June to August of 2016 before resigning amid reports he might have received millions in illegal payments from a pro-Russian political party in Ukraine.

the word

We need to talk about Kevin

Have you heard that Kevin Spacey has come out of the closet? And do you know that it was essentially in response to a sexual-assault allegation? Most likely!

Sunday night, BuzzFeed published a story in which actor Anthony Rapp claimed when he was merely 14, a 26-year-old Spacey made sexual advances toward him. A few hours later, at the stroke of midnight, Spacey responded in turn via Twitter, saying he didn't remember the incident but also? He's gay. Are you sufficiently distracted now?

People on Twitter were clearly not having it. Author and activist Dan Savage perhaps said it best, writing "Nope to Kevin Spacey's statement. There's no amount of drunk or closeted that excuses or explains away assaulting a 14-year-old child."

Lessons I hope Kevin Spacey has learned: talk to your publicist first. Also? nobody believes in the mangled lacefront you're probably using. The more you know!

Not buying it.

In the words of Hall and Oates, you two "make-ah my dreams come true."

Are Jenny and Chris back on?

Has Zeus above heard our late-night cries? You know, the ones where we beg over and over for Jenny Slate and Chris Evans to kiss and makeup? Maybe!

Slate and Evans — who dated briefly and only have the kindest things to say about each other — first inspired rumors that they had reunited after some delightful Twitter flirting. Now, Evans has gone to Washington, D.C., maybe only to see Slate perform stand-up. Because he is a supportive friend/maybe boyfriend.

Of course, friends support friends. And friends even flirt with other friends on Twitter. But, usually, friends don't gush to Vulture about their friends (slash ex-boyfriends), saying things like, "Last year was a giant, big year for my heart."

So yes, based on these little tidbits of information, we shall continue to hope.

Adam Conover mansplains Halloween

The "Adam Ruins Everything" star enlightens us on the spooky holiday, Trump and stand-up comedy.

RACHAEL VAUGHAN CLEMMONS
@rachaelclemz
rachael.clemmons@metro.us

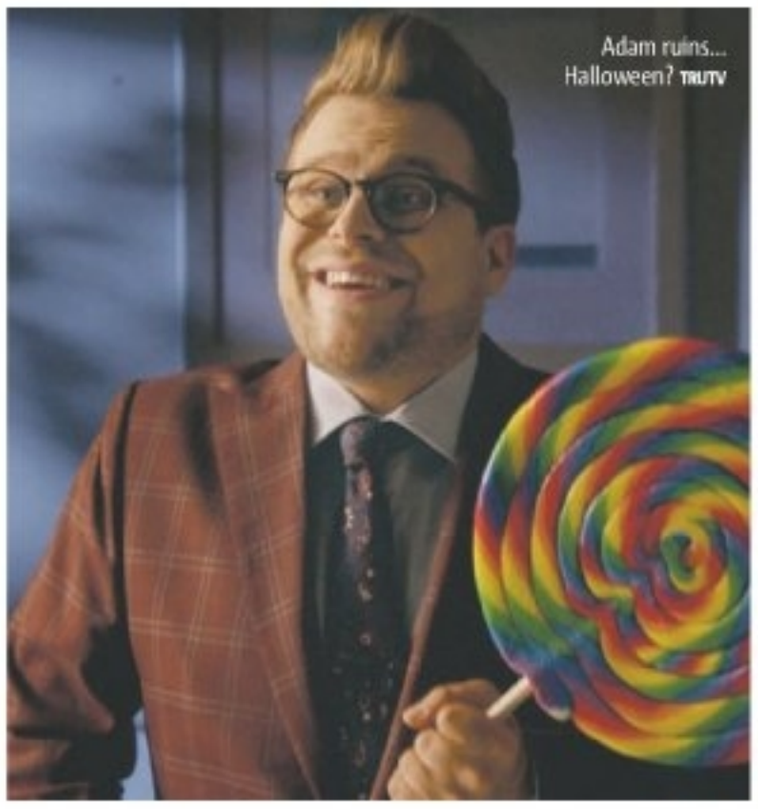
In "Adam Ruins Everything," comedian and lapsed academic Adam Conover does, well, exactly that. And considering he is, perhaps the original purveyor of the "Well, actually," that means he's ruining Halloween and all things spooky, too.

In a special episode that aired last week, he effectively ruins the cherished holiday. Turns out your fear of tampered candy is unfounded and the spooky "War of the Worlds" broadcast was old-timey click-bait. Is ye olde Halloween spirit ruined for you, yet?

We talked to the 34-year-old about his favorite topics to ruin and not taking on Trump.

What are some of your favorite topics on "Adam Ruins Everything"?

We did a whole episode on climate change that was based on my own worry that all these individual things that we try to do to prevent climate change weren't really going to help. But the expert we had on the show, this guy named Dale Jamieson — who is a climate professor at NYU and a philosopher — was really able to help me come to terms with how to think about climate change. That we always have the ability to make a better world by making a collective effort. That's why the Paris Agreement was so very important. We wrote that before the Trump administration pulled out of it, but the agreement itself seems to be surviving.



Trump is one of the spookiest things in the world right now Can you "ruin" him?

I mean, we are not a current-events show. The one thing I'll say though, is a lot of people talk about Trump as if he's something brand new in politics, like it's this crazy thing. So if you look at Trump, and you're [thinking] Trump is not normal and we have to get back to what's normal, the reality is he's always been kind of normal. This kind of thing hasn't always been this powerful, but it's always been with us.

It feels like between Trump and climate change, people are very worried about the world as we know it ending, but it seems to be part of a bigger cycle.

Well, I'm never in favor of when people say, "Oh, the world is ending." Because when they say that, they're always throwing up their hands. Even if stuff is going to s—t, in your opinion, you still have a responsibility and an ability to make the world for the future better. There's no point in which you should throw up your hands and say, "Hey, everything is terrible and let's stop trying because the world is ending." In my opinion that's a real cop out and people should knock it off.

Sports star Halloween costume suggestions

What should Boston's best and Boston's most hated go as tonight?

MATT BURKE
@burke_metro
matthew.burke@metro.us

In honor of All Hallows' Eve, we have compiled a list of Boston sports stars, and sports stars Boston fans love to hate, and have given them costume ideas. Without further adieu.

Kyrie Irving as a Continental map
You may have heard: The Celtics' star kind of, sort of, believes the Earth is flat.

Rob Gronkowski as porn star Bibi Jones
Gronk is definitely that guy in high school or college who dresses up as a girl. Gronk famously posed with young Bibi a few years back with his shirt off while she wore a Gronkowski 87 jersey with no pants on. It's time to return the favor.

Isaiah Thomas wearing an "I Hate Danny Ainge" T-shirt with knife sticking out of his back Ainge ironically wore an "I Hate Danny Ainge" T-shirt himself in the 80s when he got his hands on the item made by Detroit Pistons fans. The shirt is an Internet sensation these days (and is still available for purchase, FYI). Gotta think IT will buy one of these bad boys given what happened to him this year. The knife sticking out of his back is self-explanatory.

Eli Manning as a legitimate starting NFL quarterback
Manning and the Giants are 1-6 this season and he's not even the best QB in New York right now. Yup, the immortal Josh McCown has better numbers than Lucky Eli in 2017.

David Price as Dennis Eckersley
Price can just slap on a mustache and wear a jersey tee with the name, "Kirk Gibson's B—h" on the back. Easy peasy.

LeBron James wearing a Lakers jersey with the jersey number: "2018"
It's a foregone conclusion LeBron is heading to LA next summer. If he had any sense of humor at all he would do something like this, but alas, The King does not.

Tom Brady as Roger Goodell
If only Brady were openly vindictive.

Bill Belichick as Donald Trump
Belichick in a suit, talking non-stop bull—t all night. It's perfect … and also amazing that these two opposites are (or were) casual friends.

Robert Kraft as Thomas Jefferson
Have you seen Kraft's hair lately? What's going on here? There's not much you can do with a gray mullet, other than be a member of the Whig Party.

Is that David Price in that Eck Big Head? GETTY IMAGES
